

THE Kibbitzer

Issue 96

Is the shul looking for a people who likes bread? Then why do they keep asking for donations.

You get it? Dough. Bread is made of do. A nation is a people. Do nation. Nation full of dough. I'll explain.

RABBI ANSWERS HIS PUPILS

Dear Rabbi. I have been spending time around in Yeshiva, and I feel like I have no idea how to connect. Is there community and I feel like ?

Shalom My Dear Pupil. You can't join the Frum community without knowing how to talk right. Here's some simple rules to follow when talking Frum.

•Throw in a Hebrew or Yiddish Every Time You Have a Chance Be sure to have at least one Yiddish or Hebrew word in every other sentence. Hebrew is fine. Most Yeshiva guys nowadays don't know Hebrew isn't Yiddish. You can get away with Hebrew. In Israel, the Bachurs know the difference, as Yiddish uses a 'saf.'

Anytime you have a chance, throw in a Hebrew word. It gives weight to your argument. You throw in Hebrew, if it sounds like Yiddish, people believe you and they know you're closer to Gd. LMayseh. That's a word. Just throw it in. You don't have to know what it means. 'LMayseh. We picked up milk.' That's a word. Lichoyrah. Another excellent word. You don't have to use the words correctly. You just have to know how to space them. Lichoyrah. Davkah. Gashmius. Add a 'saf' to any word and you look good. Bitachon. No. It's Bisachon. If you're really Frum, it's Bisachoynis. Notice the usage of the 'oy' and the extra 'saf.' The 'oy' is very important. When talking, you should have a complaint in each word. In the word 'Bisachoynis' you can hear how Frum I am, and how much I'm feeling my arthritis. And be sure to mumble. The more you mumble, the more it sounds Yiddish. Gishmack is timeless. You can always throw in Gishmack.

•Don't Use Too Much English If you want to look like you know what you're talking about, don't use English. You look like a fool when you make any Jewish point in English. You will never win an argument if you're speaking English. Once they thrown in Hebrew or Yiddish, you've lost the argument. Arguing about whether it's fine to cook soup on Shabbis. 'It's Bishul.' You see. They threw in Hebrew. They won. And you look like an Am HaAretz.

Next time we will discuss the importance of being loud in the Beis Medrish, and how to mumble when raising your voice. Oy. This is such a Gishmack article. With all the writing, I feel it a Bissel in my elbow. Bsuroyis Toyvois.

SERMON OF REBUKE- TERUMAH

Shabbat Shalom My Pupils...

S(Shemot 25:2) 'Take for Me a portion from every man whose heart motivates him...' The shul office is going to start taking money out of people's bank accounts. As the Torah says to take... H' commands a portion for Him. You haven't donated anything to the shul that is worth... A Terumah is a portion. Something decent. Acacia wood... You donated your baseball glove from little league... Acacia wood is quality stuff. What you can do with... Terumah is a portion. A portion of something decent... You've been dropping off garbage at the shul for... The new pantry outside the shul has your trash. You should be putting in a portion of dinner. Cut off a piece of the steak.

Stick it in the pantry... Poor people shouldn't get your canned peas... Expiration should've already been. That stuff is three years beyond. The fact that the expiration is 2045... It was so bad, you got rid of it 22 years early.

What do you give to shul?... No. Those are plastic flowers. They gave shoham stones. They gave aromatic incense... I know that there was Channel 5 given at last year's fundraiser. It smells good. But now the shul smells like a retirement village... Not just Sadie's section. The men's section does too. We went from potpourri to Channel 5... No. You don't donate to a Shiva... I hope you're not motivated to help with death. I know you don't like your husband...

Rivka's Notes on Rabbi Mendelchem's Drasha:
I got great sleep once my husband died. The night after the funeral, I had so much more bed to sleep on. Amazing sleep. If I get married again, I'm not sharing a bed.

SHUL ANNOUNCEMENTS

Shiva will take place at 3pm on Wednesday. Refreshments will be served. Please don't show to the Perlstein family before that. They don't want to celebrate till Wednesday.

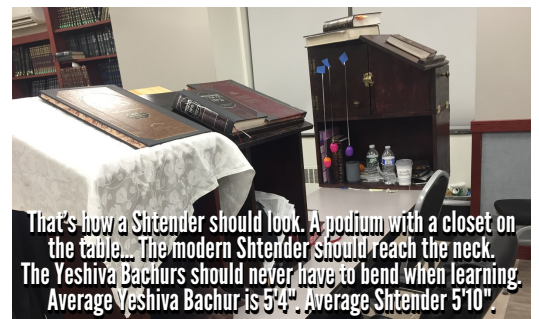

The rabbi comforted the family with a hug. He takes it back. He did not realize anybody would be offended. He didn't know what to do. She was ninety and crying. He didn't know that was abuse.

This week's Kiddish honors the one who cleaned the railing. It was full of dust. Way to take a step up for the shul, Cal. Your heart desires. Kol Hakavod. There's less dust. You're an inspiration. An example of a Jew.

Donation week is coming. The office will be in touch to collect your donations from three years ago that you haven't given yet. We've given up on anything more than four years ago. The IRS will deal with that.

We're just ashamed that you're part of this congregation.

As it is donation week, you can drop off your donations.
